Current trends in China's Foreign Policy

Katja Levy, Associate Professor at NTNU – Department of Sociology and Political Science.

It is well known that China's foreign policy has changed significantly since Xi Jinping came to power. At the same time, exchanges and dialogues between the West and China have been more or less interrupted, and up-to-date knowledge of what is being discussed in China has become scarce.

This lecture will present current trends in Chinese foreign policy. In addition, selected case studies will be used to illustrate policy-making processes, interests and strategies in China's relations with other countries and regions of the world.

Katja is an NTNU Associate Professor for Political Science, specialising in comparative politics and international relations of China and East Asia.

She has an extensive academic work background in Political Science and China Studies at various Universities in Europe and has also worked outside academia; as administrative manager for a German multinational Company in Shanghai and as political adviser of a German Member of Parliament.

She has published books and articles on East Asian countries' foreign relations and China's domestic politics, among them the co-edited volume Navigating East Asian Maritime Conflicts (Palgrave MacMillan, 2024) and the book Charity with Chinese Characteristics (Edward Elgar, 2020).

We serve coffee and pastry. We therefore would like your advance registration, either with this form, with e-mail to post@tpfinfo.no or a message to telephone 977 58 200
